

Brad Buchanan has served as the Chief Hearing Officer for the Tennessee Department of Revenue since October 2022. In addition to serving as a hearing officer, he oversees the personnel and work of the Department's Administrative Hearing Office, which conducts informal conferences with taxpayers, applying independent judgment to resolve disputes over refund denials and proposed assessments. Prior to joining the Department, Brad served for 18 years as a line attorney in the Tax Division for the Tennessee Attorney General's Office where he represented the Commissioner of Revenue in litigation over a wide variety of tax issues. Brad received his J.D. from Vanderbilt University and his bachelor's degree from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. He has high-pointed 14 states.
