Michael Mazerov was a tax policy analyst with the state fiscal policy division of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities from January 1998 through June 2024, most recently holding the title of Senior Fellow. He continues to consult with the Center and state-level fiscal policy organizations and conduct independent research on state tax policy.

His work focuses on state and local taxation of business under corporate income and sales taxes and the impact of state and local taxes on state economic performance. He has written reports on reforming state corporate income taxes and broadening state sales taxation of services. He also analyzes federal legislation affecting state taxing powers. He is a co-author (with Dan Bucks, Peter Enrich, and Darien Shanske) of a regular column in Tax Notes State, “SALT in the Public Interest.”

Prior to joining the Center, Mazerov served for nine years as Director of Policy Research for the Multistate Tax Commission, an interstate compact organization that addresses state taxation of interstate commerce. His research at the Commission supported its interstate uniformity, enforcement, friend-of-the-court, and federal legislative activities.

He has also conducted research on state and local budget and tax policy issues for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Mazerov holds a master’s degree in Public and Private Management from the Yale School of Management and a bachelor’s degree in economics and government from Oberlin College.
