Lindsay M. LaCava is a partner of the Firm's Tax Group in the New York office and advises individual and business clients on a full range of state and local tax issues. Lindsay was named a "Rising Star" in Tax Law in 2015 by Law360 and was also selected by Super Lawyers as a New York-Metro "Rising Star" for Tax in 2013-2015. Prior to joining Baker & McKenzie, Lindsay was a partner in the state and local tax group of an international law firm. In addition, she previously worked at a Big Four accounting firm, where her practice focused exclusively on state and local tax.

Practice focus

Ms. LaCava focuses her practice on state and local tax. Lindsay assists businesses and individuals with state and local tax planning and litigation matters. In the controversy area, she represents taxpayers at all levels of state and local tax disputes throughout the country, including the audit, administrative appeal, and state trial, appellate and supreme court stages. In the transactional planning and consulting area, Lindsay advises clients with respect to the state and local tax impact of various transactions and activities, including business activity taxes, sales and use taxes, transfer taxes, and personal income taxes.

Lindsay speaks on a variety of state tax topics at events around the country and is also a frequently author on state and local tax issues.
